Interstate Commerce Commission Attorney Tells of Situation Disclosed at the Oklahoma Hearing

CALLS CASE BIG ONE

Future of Independent Producers in Southwest Depends on Pipes Being Declared Common Carriers

WASHINGTON-Frank Lyon, attorney for the interstate commerce commission, who has just returned from Oklahoma where he had been with Commissioner Lane hearing the pipe line cases, says that this case promises to be one of the most important undertaken by the com-

_ It was alleged at the hearings that the pipe lines are under the complete control of the Standard Oil Company. Positive statements were made by independent oil producers that if they were accorded the same rates as the Standard Oil Company there would be no danger of their being put out of business by that company.

The question which the commission will have to decide is whether pipe lines are common carriers and subject to the same rules as other common carriers.

It is said that the effect of the entrance of the Standard Oil Company in that field has been to raise the price of crude oil from 30 to 50 cents a barrel and to decrease the price of refined prod-

TURKEY MAKES ANSWER TO ITALIAN CHARGES

LONDON-The Monitor's European bureau has received from the most authoritative source, a reply to the Italian charges against Turkey the terms of which were specially cabled to the Monitor

Regarding the alleged kidnaping of a girl of 16 and her forcible conversion and marriage to a Turk, the reply declares the girl was 23 and not 16; she was not kidnaped nor forcibly converted; her choice was freely made in spite of the persuasion of the priests and Italian consul. Second, the charge that dhows were confiscated and the cargoes and food of the sailors destroyed: The dhows, the reply says, were engaged in smuggling, and this, it is claimed, has been fully proved by independent testimony. Third, as to the matter of the Banco di Roma, the recognition of which, it was charged, would have been retarded if possible, the reply states the bank was guilty of an infringement of Turkish law, which forbids societies to acquire land.

The later difficulties, alleged opposition to Italian enterprise, arose, it is said, owing to the attempt to purchase concessions through individuals and mortgage these purchases through the bank. Fourth, the remark of Ibrahim Pasha that he would oppose all Italian enterprise, was, the reply states, directed to the enforcement of Turkish athority against Italian intrigues for stirring up sedition through the in-strumentality of nominally scientific expeditions. Fifth, the murders of Italian subjects, a charge in the Italian declaration, are declared never to have taken place. Sixth, the opposition to Italian trade, another charge, is explained as a suppression of smuggling, and the quarrels that followed were incidental to such trade in the markets of uncivilized countries.

Never have we had such a deluge of session of the Legislature. Anything the state. terms had expired, in doubt as to whether | tect their interests. have presented.

Robert Luce, the candidate for Lieu- election of 1912. tenant-Governor, delivered the final speech Luce said in part:

"Last fall an anxious people, exasperated by the high cost of living, sought to find some relief by putting a different party in power. Clever demagogues, of lower prices if only they were put in at large. office. The pinch of privation determined many a vote. Many a voter argued he could be no worse off with a change and might gain. What has such a voter to prices lower or prices higher? If last year he argued that his woes were due to Republican policies, who am I to urge him to reverse his logic and deny that this year his miseries are due to Democratic policies? Sauce for the goose, sauce for the gander.

"A horde of experts have not convinced either the Republicans or the Democrats of the Legislature that there has been thievery or even serious waste. The net result has been no saving to the people -nothing but deceptive political capital.

"We know that though the Republican party has been nominally responsible for century, its legislation has been in the ed politics with the tariff and appealed the conduct of the state during half a main non-partizan and its legislators have rarely drawn party lines in the conduct of the public business. We know that the roster of the state's officials—its judges, trustees, teachers, engineers, all those who carry on its work is probably nearer non-partizan than that of any other state in the Union. We know that in econom, and efficiency the state has taken the very front rank. So Democrat and Republican alike, we who as legislators have given the best there was in us to try to advance the welfare of Massachusetts, resent the traducing of her good name, the libel upon her honor.

"Under our system the responsibility for the nature and extent of the state's expenditure lies chiefly with the committee on ways and means of House and Senate. In these committees division on party lines is almost unknown and unanmous action is almost invariable. For their Democratic members, a long list of able and honorable men, as well as for their Republican members, of whom I have been one, I deny and denounce these charges of waste and thievery. It has been the pride of both the Democrats and the Republicans of Massachusetts that we have had an incorruptible largest ever witnessed in Massachusetts. state government. It has been our boast that whatever our differences of opinion in matters of policy, yet we have held high the standard of public honor. This boast is the right of no one party. That there is a general and growing demand for a daily newspaper which aims to be constructive, wholesome and dependable

That any newspaper of the above standard will find itself in steadily increasing favor with the reading public

Watchful of every opportunity to make the paper better, the Monitor is going to build slowly and securely on the firm foundation laid, with the hope that each effort put forth to make clean journalism more interesting and helpful will show a corresponding result in a better product, and that the improving qualities of the paper will more fully meet the needs of those seeking a conscientious newspaper.

SPAIN AND GERMANY IN SECRET MOROCCO TREATY SAYS REPORT

Negotiations With France Reach Point at Which Prophets Give Up Effort to Forecast Settlement

SPECULATION RIFE

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON-A period of quiescence has been reached in the reports as to the Moroccan negotiations. Certain prophets commit themselves to the statement that "a solution will be reached in a few days," but that particular announcement has been made so often that it has failed to attract particular attention. The fact is that the prophets are completely nonplussed, and for the moment the se creey of the conversations is proving too haffling even for "intelligent anticipation," a phrase which might frequently be rendered, "sensational guesswork.

With each succeeding reference of the negotiations to the Wilhelmstrasse or the Quai d'Orsay, comes a fresh crop of authentic rumors, none of which deceives anybody who is conversant with the facts, and none of which has any more basis than is to be found in the more or less accurate surmises of the writers. As has been persistently maintained in these columns since the beginning of the conversations between Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter and M. Cambon, the sceret has been extraordinarily well kept, and the best proof, indeed, of this is the remarkable divergence of the innumerable so-called official and semi-official views which have been confided to the public.

The latest of these confidential communications is to the effect that a secret treaty has been signed between Spain and Germany, by which, in return for Spanish support, Germany recognizes the Spanish sphere of influence in Morocco Euch a treaty may or may not exist, most probably it does not, at all events in the form made public, but whether it does or not, it is quite certain that it was not secretly contracted for the purpose of being publicly made known.

It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that Spain has not been too well treated in the matter. There has been a tendency in the English press to support the French claim upon Morocco while ignoring the Spanish claim or even hinting that it is inadmissible. The fact is that if France has a right to four-fifths of Morocco, there is no process of reason ing by which it can be maintained that Spain has not a right to the remaining fifth. The question really is whether the nations of Europe have a right to arrange what they will do with a great province of North Africa. Geographically speaking, Spain has greater interclaim to occupy the opposite shore.

No doubt, as has always been tion which constitutes a living force.

The process of conscription which, on the one hand, has converted Europe into vast armed camps, has, on the other hand, owing to the medium of popular education, created a citizen army. The citizen army regards war not only with very different feelings to the army corps which marched behind Luxemburg or Frederick, but with a positive repugnance, which is quite unknown to the tiny voluntary army which serves under the union jack. Detestation of war is, indeed, almost a concomitant of conscription, so that, curiously enough, the very means adopted by modern statesmanship for the furtherance of military designs, are being sapped in the human material out of which they are constructed. A professional army is always more willing to fight than one raised by conscription.

Land of Silver and Sunshine, of Awe-Inspiring Canyons, Snow-Crowned Mountains and Fertile Plains, State Is Making Great Progress

printed on Wednesdays, and aim give an historical summary with facts about the resources, progress and prospects of each common realth. This "Story of the States" began with a general article on Jan. 11. Each week since a sketch of a state has been given, taking up first the original 13 states; the others will follow in the order of their admission to the Union.

OLORADO has an area of 103,925 square miles. Its extent is equal to Old England and New England. The Rocky mountains occupy in Colorado alone more than five times the entire space occupied by all the Alps. The "Centennial state" has over 60 rivers and 900 lakes. It has 15,000 miles of main irrigation canals in operation and the system is rapidly extending. These canals cover 4,000,000 acres of land of which 2,500,000 acres are in actual cultivation. Colorado's mineral products exceed those of any two states in the Union, yet its agricultural products far surpass in value its mineral products. The annual product of precious metals is, approximately, $40,000,000; from farm, field, range and orchard, the state yearly receives $150,-000,000. The value of its manufactures is $200,000,000 and rapidly increasing. No equal area in the world surpasses Colorado in its wealth of coal, and it is

MELTED ICE CREAM

Melted ice cream should not be thrown away. It may be incorporated in cake cookies or in some cold dessert. For the last a little powdered gelatin must be added, varying in quantity, of course, with the result desired. Melted chocolate ice cream, into which have been stirred chopped nuts or marshmallow; makes a particularly delicious combination and requires only the addition of a little liquid jelly or melted gelatin When using melted ice cream for cake leave out the milk called for in the recipe and lessen the quantity of sugar and butter, says the Ladies Home Journal. No general rule can be given for this, as ice cream differs so much in richness that each housekeeper must evolve her cwn recipe. The flavor of the cake must be considered, of course, and the flavor of the ice cream must harmonize

Has the constructive integrity that produces a well balanced musical instrument. It responds instantly to the artist's most exacting feelings with an accuracy and delicacy that truly fascinate.

Perhaps this accounts for the immense sales of the Emerson. At any rate when you consider the fact that during the past sixty years there have been made and sold nearly One Hundred Thousand Emerson Pianos, widely distributed amongst that class which considers quality an integral part of wise selection, you will readily understand that the Emerson could not have attained and maintained such supremacy unless absolutely merited.

Merit alone can command such large public approbation!

In this lies your safety in buying an Emerson. It has been tried in the crucible of time. Each year but enhances its popularity. You should see it; hear it and you'll become enamored of its rich, mellow, well balanced tone; play it and you'll feel your finer musical senses take new courage.

The price is low for a piano of such recognized merit. Catalogue points the road to safety.

ENGINEERS MEET

LYNN, Mass.-There is a movement must be amended in several particulars, is seeking the cooperation of about 100 here to form a Lynn section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the first meeting will be held in Odd Fellows hall! West Lynn, tomorrow evesing. C. P. Steinmetz will address the meeting. All eligible to membership in lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Peabody, Salem and Marblehead have been invited.

It is proposed to hold weekly meetings. All that are interested in electrical work are eligible for membership and according to the laws of the institute the yearly fees cannot be more than $2.

LARGER LYNN PHONE EXCHANGE

LYNN, Mass .- The Lynn branch of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company is to be enlarged. The company desires to procure the whole or a part of the Woodman estate, adjacent to the land occupied by the telephone company. It is understood that the Woodman property cannot be sold until Jan. 1, but some satisfactory arrangement can be made so that work on the new addition to the telephone building can be started immediately. The growth of Lynn has been so rapid in 10 years that the telephone service has outgrown the room in the exchange building.

A GREATER DEMAND FOR CRUDE RUBBER

NEW YORK-No evidence of any increased demand for crude rubber is noted among manufacturers and prices remain stationary, if anything showing a slight decline. Para grades quoted here at $1.13 to $1.15. The same grades have gone as high as $1.20. Last week's auction of Cevlous in the London market, has had a great deal to do with the decline in price of Para rubber.

This, market weakness has only brought out the absolute absurdity of the report from Brazil that the government of that country is about to order another valorization plan put into effect ir an effort to hold up prices. This report was to the effect that unless rubber of the new crop advances to at least $1.70 the valorization plan will become operative and will practically put the lid on the output of Para rubber. There is absolutely nothing to indicate that rubber will go up even to $1.50 for some

This is the season when the tire manufacturers have practically finished their

Most of the boot and shoe plants closed down during August, and there is no evidence now that they will be called upon to operate at anywhere near capacity for some time, unless early fall weather conditions change. And furthermore, it was not so long ago that crude rubber went down below the $1 mark, and it can reasonably be assumed that manufacturers anticipating any considerable fall business bought their supply at a figure even below the present low

Rubber output of Brazil the last year has not been a small one by any means, but the demand has fallen off. There are said to be a number of large holders would only welcome the placing into 65% 65% 65% effect of a Brazilian valorization plan which would advance prices and allow them to unload at a figure which could always be below that Brazil would hold

RELIC IS FINE ONE

Artistic Loss Caused by Careless Removal of the Famous Fireplaces Which England Hoped to Retain

(Special to the Monitor) LONDON It is announced that Tattershall castle has been sold to ar American purchaser, whose name is at present withheld. It is the intention of this purchaser to have the castle demol ished and the bricks and stones carefully numbered with a view to their recrection in America.

In England, where such relics are not particularly rare, the funds for the purhase of it have failed to be raised though the purchase money was com made to preserve the fireplaces, and these would have been retained in the coun try if it had not been found on examina tion that they had been so damaged in the process of hacking them out that they were not considered valuable enough

The castle is a-fine old relic, a description of which has lately appeared in the Monitor, and the photographs of it and of one of the famous fireplaces show that all that has been written on the subject is in no way an exaggeration.

It is undoubtedly a misfortune, from an artistic point of view, that these fireplaces, which were the models for those in the House of Common, should have been irredeemably damaged by the carelessness by which they were removed.

A man had built him a new house, a house with frills, as the Youths Companion expresses it. One of its adornments was a door bell, then a new thing in the village.

When the house was finished a neighbor went one evening to make a call. The windows were all open but the door stood shut, so the neighbor rapped a little hesitatingly-everything looked so very fine. There was no answer, though he could see that the people were within. He rapped louder. No reply. Another rap. Then the owner, who was rocking gravely in his new patent rocker in the sitting room, called out, "Ring the door bell, why can't ye? Don't you know anything at all?"

Russia a Field for American Trade

CONSUL-GENERAL SNODGRASS, who has represented the United States in Moscow for the last three years, is on a visit to this country, and, being interviewed in New York, one of his first statements was to the effect that, judging from the letters he received at his post from this country, and by the questions asked, Americans are poorly informed with regard to Russia, its people and its progress. A few of his later statements will enable the reader to determine fairly well to what extent this assertion is based on fact. To begin with, Moscow, he tells us, has a population of 2,000,000, and "one of the finest street car systems in the world." The city owns the railway and straphanging is unknown. The lines made a profit of 2,000,000 roubles last year, which will be used for paving the streets.

American cotton to the value of $50,000,000 is sold in Moscow annually, mainly through German middlemen. Russia itself produces another $50,000,000 worth of cotton, principally in the transcaspian country. The empire is not regarded very generally in the United States as a manufacturing country, nor is it known here to any great extent as a textile-producing nation, yet, strange to say, Moscow has one cotton mill that employs 20,000 persons.

As to Russia in general, the idea that it is a wild country, a rather prevalent one in the United States, and that traveling about in it is uncomfortable and unsafe, the consul-general says, is without excuse. The Russians are a mild-mannered people and they treat foreigners with courtesy and gentleness. There are only 60,000 miles of railroad in the country at present, but construction is being

The United States exports about one third of the foreign machinery going into Russia annually, and its total trade in the empire is worth at present about $75,000,000 annually, as against Germany's $225,000,000. There has been a great shifting about in Russia's foreign trade during the last twelve years and the field is now an open and an inviting one. Recently, more Americans are visiting Russia and taking a more active interest in the country, its affairs and possibilities. A familiar note is struck in the last sentences that dropped from the consul-general's lips-a note that will recall to students of American commerce the plea so often made in behalf of South American trade. "I have been endeavoring to get American interests to start a bank in Moscow," he says. "This the Germans have done and the English have lately opened a $7,500,-000 bank in St. Petersburg. This is one important way to facilitate

When Americans turn their attention seriously to the building up of trade with countries having credit systems very different from those in operation at home, this is the way that must be taken.

Commissions

THE method of dealing in behalf of the public with the common carriers of the country through a commission rather than through Congress or the courts has been pretty thoroughly tested, and it is but stating a fact to say that on the whole it has thus far proved satisfactory. Whether it is a method efficient in itself or whether its success up to this time has been due mainly to the clear-sightedness, ability and fairness of those who have constituted the commission in the past and who constitute it in the present, is a point that remains to be determined by fuller experience. For all practical purposes just now it is sufficient to know that sanity of a high order has marked and still marks the conduct of the interstate commerce commission in its relations with the transportation interests. We have a striking illustration of this fact in certain remarks made by Commissioner Franklin K. Lane of that body before the City Club of Los Angeles not long ago. He had laid down the proposition that regulation of interstate commerce could not be properly carried out by legislative bodies, and that only through the interstate commerce commission was there hope of regulation that would solve the transportation problems of the nation, when he added: "But in regulation you must always have the confidence of the railroad men that they will be treated fairly. The true test of all regulation is fairness and justice." Now, Commissioner Lane's reference to "railroad men" must be given no narrow interpretation. Well informed people know that when the railroads, or railroad owners, or railroad men, or railroad interests, are referred to, a great deal more is meant than roadbed, rolling stock or corporation. The railroads of the United States, to go no further, represent the energies, the savings, the investments of hundreds of thousands of people, and, directly or indirectly, contribute to the subsistence of millions. It is no small matter, and no "class" matter, therefore, when fairness and justice are observed in the regulation of the business of these tremendous industries.

The common sense displayed by the interstate commerce commission has gone far toward creating a favorable impression of the proposal to apply the commission idea to tariff and trust regulation. The need of the hour is governmental agencies that will stand, like a stone wall, between popular and national welfare and mere emotion. If an extension of the commission idea will lead to settled and satisfactory business conditions, and it gives evidence of some ability to do so, it should be welcomed.

A Bright Outlook for Macaroni

Although it might have seemed so at first, present occurrences in southern Europe are not likely to affect seriously the prospects of the macaroni output. United States Consul Handley at Naples reports that the manufacture of macaroni in his district and adjoining ones was never in a more flourishing condition than now. Many new factories have been started and these, with the old ones, are working night and day to meet the constantly growing demand for this food. The south of Italy, of course, is the main source of the world's macaroni supply. United States importations of this article from that quarter last year amounted in value to $1,480,582, an increase of $735,768 over the previous year, and this notwithstanding that the manufacture of macaroni has become such an important home industry in recent years that some of the concerns engaged in it have formed themselves

Secretary Wilson has been striving for several years to find a macaroni wheat kernel that would enable the promoters of this infant industry to compete with the Italians, and while he has not succeeded in attaining his ideal in this respect, it seems to be a fact that only the most expert and fastidious of macaroni consumers can detect, even when the native article is served alone, the difference between it and the imported product. When served with cheese it will deceive the most refined connoisseur, and when served in soup, Italians who, so to speak, have been brought up on it, do not hesitate to claim

The demand for macarom is becoming so widespread that there is no good reason why the United States and Italy should not share the field together amicably and profitably. There will, necessarily, be the usual tendency in this country to produce the macaroni stems by machinery, while Italy, with the conservation characteristic of older civilizations, will continue to produce them by hand.

However this may be, the cheering thing is that the macaroni outlook is bright and promises to continue so. There was a time when the Anglo-Saxon, Teutonic and Celtic races were content with the foodstuffs and confections that had been handed down through generations and through ages by the fathers. Now, and especially in these states, and also in Canada, the races mingle so much that their tastes have become mixed, and they have not only formed indiscriminate likings for the viands peculiar to each, to the extent that all eat potatoes, pretzels, hot biscuits, rye bread and doughnuts, but the vast majority of Them would now feel as if something precious had gone out of their lives if anything should happen to stop the macaroni output of the Latins.

Eliminating the Dark Places

We seem to be approaching a period of wholesome competition in street lighting among neighborhoods, districts and communities. To be recognized as the "best lighted" is becoming a civic ambition and a very commendable one. Not the least worthy phase of it is the tendency to regard illumination as a necessity as well as a luxury. Indeed, it is coming to be an accepted belief among thoughtful people that, as much of the vice and misery of the populous centers is at once the cause and the result of the darkness that hangs over them, its elimination, by the simple introduction of light, must make for their moral and social uplift.

It has been said that the introduction of illuminating gas did more than any other invention or innovation of the early part of the nineteenth century to increase the comforts of living and value of property in urban communities. It added immensely to the forces of law and order. Its revelations compelled greater cleanliness. It gave a larger measure of security than they had ever enjoyed before to those who were compelled to be on the streets at night. What the gas light did for the early part of the last century, the electric light, in a degree many times multiplied, did for the latter part. And in these earlier years of the twentieth century it would appear that there is to be a higher appreciation and a greater application of the newer illuminant than ever before.

Of course, the great cities of the world, as the visitor and the sightseer views them, are at present flooded with electric light by night. Where the steps of the tourist turn in London, New York, Paris, Vienna, St. Petersburg, Budapest, San Francisco, Cairo, Manila, St. Louis, Denver, Tokio, Chicago, Montreal, Philadelphia, Harbin, Boston, the electric light is there to show him the ay through and to expose the attractions of the leading thorough fares. The commercial instinct, and the advertising instinct, are common possessions of humanity and may be depended upon to manifest themselves in much the same way everywhere. But the present lighting movement means more than illuminating the bright spots of the cities-it means the throwing of light in greater volume than attempted heretofore into the dark places.

The good that must result from the extirpation of darkness in the cities of the country and the world is beyond calculation. As well attempt to measure the moral influence of sunshine.

THE election of a grandson of the late William E. Gladstone as a member of the House of Commons for the Kilmarnock Burglis -and a grandson who bears the name of the great Liberal-is an event of interest to the world in general. Whether this interest shall continue will depend upon the young man himself, however, rather than upon his name or lineage.

THE seal treaty has not as yet been ratified, and, in view of the importance given the proceedings leading up to its successful negotiation, it is only reasonable to wonder why. If the ruthless slaughter of the seal may be prevented, one would haturally suppose that the sooner it were prevented the better.

THERE was a time when a comet, with or without a tail, ranked as a first-class attraction and was given unlimited space, but the thing was overdone a year or so ago and nobody, except, perhaps, the automobilists and the astronomers, pay any attention to the Brooks affair.

EVIDENTLY, there is nothing left for the "Cubs" to do that will restore them, this year at least, to the place they once held in Chicago's affections. Even when they win a game now, as sometimes happens, it is regarded as merely trifling with the inevitable.

It is mentioned to the credit of the newly elected mayor of San Francisco, whose name is Rolph, that he has not during the campaign or since the announcement of his victory referred casually to Pocahontas as a former member of his family.

ADEQUATE sectional representation of New England at the coming national exposition at San Francisco is urged by Governor Foss, preferably jointly, the six states thus demonstrating by the project, whatever else may or may not be done by it, that they are able to work together to conserve the welfare of an old but by no means defunct section of the nation. Were this the only fortunate outcome of the endeavor it would be worth doing, so diffused is the impression in some quarters of the country that New England spells "has been."

From

Such a sectional exhibit would have many results. With the opening of the Panama canal, Boston and Providence and San Francisco and Seattle are to be very much nearer for purposes of inexpensive transportation of freight. Commerce between the Pacific and the North Atlantic states is to be greater than any prophets now dare specify. There is something that appeals to the imaginative as well as rational side of business and manufacturing in the plan of a formal New England trek of exhibitors across the plains and over the guardian mountains, and camping down by the Golden Gate for a season. Thus did the New England fathers of old take risks when they had a noble vision.

A Servant of Sovereigns

EDWARD EVERETT HALE, during his varied career, served many useful purposes, not the least of which was his delight in "calling down" all of his countrymen and especially all Europeans whom he overheard or detected writing about public officials in the United States as if they were "rulers." Any such misreading of the facts of American democracy stirred him. Forthwith he proceeded to expound the correct theory that officials are servants, not rulers; that the People is sovereign, and not those individuals who are elevated by it to positions of duty and trust. Mr. Bryan had this same differentiation in mind, in welcoming President Taft to Nebraska. His first-hand observation of government in his tour about the world has taught Mr. Bryan what is unquestionably true, that the President's power today is "greater than any civilized people would entrust to an hereditary ruler," so paradoxical are the turns of events and the shapings of government under the stress of facts.

The President's position is greater than that of kings in its unrestrained authority. But in the last analysis he is a servant of sovereigns, as Mr. Bryan also remarked, and as constantly needs to be said, especially at a time when the coincident reaction against both legislature and judiciary is tending to add to the prestige and power

Whatever practical untoward results come from the quadrennial campaign determining who shall be President of the United States, its great value, both theoretical and practical, is that it burns anew into the minds of all citizens the belief that they are the ultimate source of power, and that the seemingly all powerful executive when in office in reality is but a trustee, a steward, a servant, if you please, for the sovereign People. And what is true of the President is true in a lesser degree, quantitatively but not qualitatively, of all other

Of course this conception of official servitude, like all ideas, can be perverted. Officials in accepting office do not become automatons, biographs or machines that only reel off "records." They have rights as well as duties. Times often come when it is their duty to resist their sovereign—the People—until sanity has taken the place of passion. But under normal conditions of American political life the note to strike is that which Hale in his day never omitted, namely that ultimate power is with the elector, not with the official. If the fact is not recognized and steadily fought for then bureaucratic methods take root, oligarchies spring up, and officials take to naming · their successors.

THERE continues to be periodical complaint on the part of new or unknown writers that they do not receive proper consideration at the hands of manuscript readers and editors, and there continues to be, in behalf of these readers and editors, denials of all allegations of favoritism, prejudice, neglect or incompetence. Writers who have not succeeded in getting into the magazines or in finding publishers insist that the manuscripts returned with thanks are often of greater merit than the manuscript accepted; the editors reply that while their judgment is not infallible, decision on this point must of necessity be left to them, and that, on the whole, the character of the magazine and book output justifies their methods and conclusions.

Jeannette L. Gilder is among the latest defenders of those who pass upon the work of writers. She has been a manuscript reader and an editor, as well as a contributor, for some years, and it will be generally conceded that she is qualified to speak on this subject. She does so plainly, pronouncing the complaints made by disappointed writers utterly unfounded. The editor, she insists with many who have preceded her, is keen to find a new writer. "He much prefers," says Miss Gilder, "to find a big new author than to buy manuscripts from a big author whose reputation is already established." The new writer does not cost so much. He has nothing to sell but the goods. And there is the editor's joy of discovery.

The reading public is in no position to pass upon the claim that some of the literary matter rejected is superior to that accepted, for the reason that it sees only what is published. It is worthy of remark, however, that the writers who make complaint of inadequate or unfair treatment at the hands of editors are, as a rule, soon silenced. They are not "bought off," we may be sure, nor are they intimidated by the sternness of the editorial reply. It is only reasonable to suppose that what happens is that they attack their manuscripts again, perhaps rewrite them, and then try other magazines or publishers. Greater pains bring surer rewards. Perhaps the best lesson the young or new writer can learn is that good work means hard work. It may be that the toil has been in preparation rather than in actual performance, but, even where there is talent or genius to begin with, first or last success must be won by honest effort. It is easier to blame the editor than to strive to come up to his standard, but the latter way is best.
